SCC Music Teams with Benicia Ballet

The Benicia Ballet, teaming with the Solano Community College music department and the Symphony Orchestra of Northern California, will present the world premiere of "Legacy," with new music by Durwynne Hsieh and choreography by the company's artistic director, Margaret Rose Kenrick.

Set for two performances March 17 at SCC, the new work was inspired by the life story of a generous professor who battled with the complications of Parkinson's disease, a neurological disorder that causes progressive loss of control of body movement.

The ballet walks through the life of a young person as he learns to live with the disease and rise above the loss of movement to find peace. As it is expressed through dance, the new work "has the potential to heal and educate whole communities over time," a company spokesperson noted in a press release.

Parkinson's is named after James Parkinson, a English physician who described this degenerative disease that afflicts people in their later years. The cause is unknown, and the mean age of onset is 57. Scientists know that neurons in the brain that normally produce dopamine, a neurotransmitter, one of the chemicals responsible sending signals between the brain's nerve cells, deteriorate.

Performances are at 2 and 7 p.m. the SCC Theatre, 4000 Suisun Valley Road, Fairfield. Tickets range from $15 to $24, with assigned seating, and can be purchased through the ballet company website, at www.beniciaballet.org. Additionally, tax-deductible donations toward the project may be made at the company website under "Support Legacy." BBT is a registered 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization.

Tips Given to Staff & Students on Active Shooter

ALICE was the topic of discussion for students, staff and faculty Wednesday at Solano

Community College.

The program's name is an acronym for Alert, Lockdown, Information, Counter and Evacuate.

Lt. Brian Travis of the Solano County Sheriff's Office has offered active-shooter training classes on the campus before. At the end of his presentation, he welcomed questions and suggestions from the group of about 30.

The campus has some protections in place. Three buildings – the theater, biotechnology and auto tech – have remote locking systems. New buildings will have the same technology in the future, said Celia Esposito-Noy, the college district's superintendent/president.

The Sleeve, a metal device that covers the arm of a door retractor, will also be used on the inside of doors.

It can be applied and removed within seconds and secured by anyone, not just a person with a key to the door.

The college also uses the Regroup Mass Notification System, which offers communication to social media, mobile phones and emails.

Awareness also plays a key role, those who attended the lunchtime workshop learned. "When you see something, say something," Esposito-Noy said. "If it doesn't feel right in your gut, tell them. We want to do preventive measures rather than responsive measures." Travis recalled growing up in the 1980s when earthquake and fire drills were the only ones needed at schools.
